Crackdown on illegal units

Krista Wood

ALBANY — Most "mother-in-law" units here are illegal but City Council hopes to change that. Councilmembers gave tentative approval Monday night for zoning ordinance amendments that will entice owners to move forward and legalize their backyard residential units. "This time we really, really want it," said Councilmember Bert Nichols, referring to an effective 1983 amendment which gained little compliance from homeowners. Under the proposed amendments, new units must abide by parking and siting rules, but will benefit from relaxed lot

When will Albany get a new library?

City and school district at odds over priorities

By Ben Hellwarth

The Journal

Anyone who visits the Albany public library can see that it is a crowded place.

The structure that was built in the 1950s to house 20,000 books is now packed with twice that number, not to mention a supply of paperbacks, magazines, compact discs, records and a collection of 400 video cassettes.

Of necessity, the library's materials are meticulously organized, like pieces of a jigsaw puzzle, to fit into the 3,300-square-foot space at Solano and Talbot avenues.

And even an economical use of space leaves little room for the large number of people who frequent the library.

On a recent weekday afternoon, the three chairs available for browsing through newspapers and magazines were all taken. The three dining-room-sized tables squeezed into the adult section were filling up with readers. A line of patrons waiting to check out books was causing an uncomfortable jam near the building's entrance.

Indeed, state standards recommend 10,000 square feet of space given the number of volumes in the Albany library and the public's heavy use of the facility.

"If we want to put a new book in the library, then we have to take another one off the shelves to make room for it," said Ronnie Davis, branch manager of the Albany Library.

The City Council and school board readily agree that the overcrowded library must be expanded.

But in a time of soaring property values, tight budgets, complex bond issues and a growing student population, the two groups of officials are finding their conflicting priorities getting in the way of

City manager treads softly into El Cerrito city politics

EL CERRITO — Since his arrival in El Cerrito on full-time basis, new City Manager Gary Pokorny has been living "in a motel room somewhere in town."

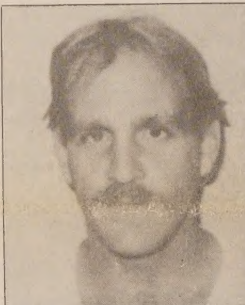

"I'd like to get out of it and into something more comfortable," said Pokorny, whose room lacks even kitchen privileges.

Approval of a revised equity sharing agreement between El Cerrito and its newest employee will soon allow Pokorny to move into a $325,000 home here. The agreement was finalized Monday night, just two days before the deadline for buying the property.

Michael Douglas Taylor

Richard Wayne Gettic

Kidnap suspect has long criminal record

Nicole Atkinson

ALBANY — One of the two who allegedly kidnapped, held and tried to strangle an elderly woman in January was involved in a string of serious crimes stretching from Southern California to Illinois, according to information released by the police Department.

Michael Douglas Taylor, 36, is described as a fugitive with tattoos and a roster of aliases. He was wanted by the FBI for armed robbery, kidnapping, rape, sexual assault and attempted murder in Orange County, River Grove, Ill., and Albany.

Taylor was identified recently in the Albany woman spotted on an April 9 episode of the crime show "America's Most Wanted." The woman told police Taylor was her accomplice, Richard Wayne Gettic, 29, were the men who kidnapped her Jan. 9 and drove her to Palo Alto where they held her and tried to strangle her with a rope before she managed to escape. Police flew to Pensacola, Fla. to interview Gettic, who is in prison attempting to sell stolen jewelry to an undercover agent.

Taylor and Gettic are believed to be responsible for a $450,000 jewel heist and kidnapping in River Grove, Ill., near Chicago.

"He waived his rights and was more than willing to talk about the jewelry store robbery," said Albany Det. Willard Leggett. "But he invoked the Fifth Amendment when we started to question him about our case."

Gettic admitted to police that Taylor had been in New York a few weeks before their interview.

"Right now we have other leads," Leggett said. "It's possible he's left the country. It is rumored that he might be in Brazil."

Authorities believe Taylor may be with his 25-year-old girlfriend, Lisa Marie Brindes. Brindes is described as pretty, 5-feet, 6-inches tall, 110 pounds.

Leggett said investigators have discovered physical evidence linking Gettic to the Albany kidnapping.

A $400,000 warrant was issued for both men in Illinois. A no-bail warrant was issued in Alameda County.

Gettic first must stand trial in Florida and Chicago before he can be extradited to Albany to face criminal charges of rape, kidnapping, robbery and attempted murder.

El Cerrito council boosts city fees

Starting this summer, permits, center rentals will cost more

By Chris Treadway

The Journal

EL CERRITO — Fees for city swimming pools, tennis courts and baseball fields will all go up July 1, as will charges for home occupation use permits and some city publications.

The master fee schedule revision approved by the City Council Monday night will raise many of the fees now charged by the planning, community services, public works, police and finance departments.

For example, residents will be charged $4 (up from $3.80) for an hour and a half's use of city tennis courts, plus an extra $2.50 (formerly $1.65) for tokens to operate the court lights.

Business licenses for home occupations, now $93.25, will be

Business licenses for all employers with a fixed place of business will see an average increase of slightly more than 5 percent. The exact fee depends on the number of employees.

Similar increases will go into effect for rentals of city baseball, basketball and swimming facilities; city-run halls and clubhouses; and reserved picnic areas.

Councilmember Stephen Porter questioned some aspects of the proposed increases, including the tennis court fees. "It seems $5 an hour for lights and reservations is getting fairly expensive."

The increases in community services fees had already been approved at a previous meeting.

Planning department fees, to be raised 10 percent, were based primarily on increased personnel costs.

Subscriptions for city planning commission minutes and agendas will increase from $60 per year to $66.

Fees for most planning department publications, such as parking guidelines, sign regulations, seismic safety element, will remain the same.

The cost of zoning maps will go down from $3.50 to $2 because it was determined the city is charging too high a rate.

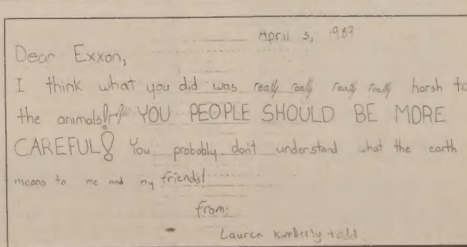

A complete list of the revised fee schedule is available at the city offices.

In other action, the council approved a revised equity sharing agreement for the purchase of a

You don't miss your water...

...TIL YOUR WELL RUNS DRY. Ever wonder what you or your city would do in the event of an emergency that cut off outside water supplies?

Such a possibility has occurred to the City of Albany, which is attempting to find out which places in town have water wells.

"It's an emergency provision for water in the event of a disaster such as an earthquake," said Planning Director Claudia Cappio.

Cappio said that off-hand she didn't know the exact location of any wells in the city, but added "I know there are some existing."

"It's a matter of identifying them. My first line of investigation will be to ask the fire department."

ALSO FROM THE PLANNER'S OFFICE: Cappio said release of the Albany Waterfront Environmental Impact Report (new, improved version) is "imminent."

Final changes on the long-awaited volume were recently completed, but there is still no exact date when the public can get its hands on the report and start the fun process of disputing its conclusions.

THE "IMMINENT" EVENT in El Cerrito, meanwhile, is the annual "Spring Cleanup Day" (actually a series of days from May 6 through 12).

It's the twice-annual event when residents can parade to the sidewalk and pile all that junk that takes up too much room in the garage and garbage. Some size and weight restrictions do apply, so check with the city before dumping your anvil collection.

Each pickup brings an interesting assortment of cast-offs to the sidewalk, some of which are swiped before the trucks ever arrive.

Remember that goods (bads) are piled on the odd-numbered side of the street this year.

ATTENTION SHOPPERS! Clerks at the El Cerrito Woolworth's may have wondered why there was such intense interest in the $1.28 packs of Fleer baseball cards they had on sale.

It seems that these packs were from the set's first printing, which was recalled about two months ago because one of the cards clearly showed the F-word written on the bottom of player Bill Ripken's bat.

The Fleer company managed to pull most of the unsold cards out of circulation, making those that

On the Avenue

By Chris Treadway

did get out high-priced collector's items.

"We sold them like hotcakes for $50 to $75," said Doug of Dave's Dugout, a baseball card store on Solano Avenue. "They peaked at $75 and it's currently at $25 to $45 right now."

Sharp-eyed collectors who wandered into Woolworth's late last week got an even better price and the cards quickly sold out.

THE RUMOR PERSISTS, although we can find no verification, that a shock absorber manufacturer is thinking about filming a commercial in El Cerrito using the northbound, right-hand lane of San Pablo Avenue to demonstrate the toughness of its shocks....

PARROT WATCH: A reader was intrigued by last week's tale in The Journal about the notorious Renegade Parrots.

Elma Pawson, who has lived here 60 years, recalls visiting a friend's bird shop in Albany about 1926 to see a parrot that was trained to sing "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

It was enough of a novelty that the bird was signed to appear on either the Orpheum or Pantages vaudeville circuit. "It was rather interesting," Pawson said. "It was the first time I'd heard of birds going into vaudeville."

Her friends, Andrew and Nelly Hasseler, stocked a number of similar exotic birds before they gave up the shop. Pawson wonders if it isn't possible that "the birds from his shop may have been ancestors" of today's renegade parrots.

Folks with memories of that pet shop or similar bird stories are invited to send in their theories on the renegade parrots.

Letters

Twelve years and not much has happened

Editor:

Back in January, The Journal reported that the (El Cerrito) Redevelopment Agency was seeking an additional 12 years in which to continue its attempts to rework the San Pablo Avenue corridor. This ought to make the city stop and think a bit. The Redevelopment Agency has already had almost 12 years and seems to have accomplished very little. Certainly in the seven years that I've lived in El Cerrito the appearance of San Pablo Avenue has not changed much.

This does not, however, bother me particularly. What does bother me is the pretense that keeping the redevelopment program alive after another 12 years will somehow improve life in El Cerrito. Let me elaborate.

Over the past several years we have heard quite a lot about the city's negotiations with developers. The pattern seems to be a continuing series of attempts to lure in blockbuster projects, typically offering substantial concessions in the process.

The concessions, in turn, largely or entirely cancel the revenue enhancements that were supposedly a major point of the whole redevelopment scheme. Unfortunately, each blockbuster falls through because at some point the developer's demands become so great or the delays so extensive that one side or the other backs out.

Undaunted, the Redevelopment Agency looks for another blockbuster with which the scenario can be repeated.

Twelve years should have been enough if the approach is fundamentally sound. The difficulty is that even under fairly optimistic assumptions (refer to John Dunn's April 20 commentary in The Journal, for example), it is not at all clear that the program will ever pay for itself.

The City Council should consider the possibility that the approach was never appropriate in the first place. It would be unfortunate if we were to let ourselves be shilled into another 12 years of a scheme that offers little besides an ongoing job security program for the Redevelopment Agency.

Perhaps the City Council sees itself in larger terms than most of its nominal responsibilities would allow and thinks that successful large-scale redevelopments would allow it to put its permanent mark on the future of the city.

Unfortunately, the effect may have been counterproductive. In hopes of attracting large projects, much of San Pablo Avenue was designated a free-fire zone for the Redevelopment Agency. Eminent domain, instead of being reserved for cases of essential public need, seems to be viewed simply as a way of overriding inconvenient objections to the City Council's grand plans. This discounts both existing businesses and investment that might arise independently of the Redevelopment Agency's preconceptions.

It may be too much to expect that our current city government will at some point realize that an attractive future for El Cerrito does not depend on developments. It would be able to start by recognizing that Cerrito is primarily a pleasant convenient place to live and lining San Pablo Avenue with office buildings and Target stores will not enhance our quality of life.

The next step might be to up the current all-or-nothing redevelopment approach in favor of encouraging smaller investments on a case-by-case basis. This could gradually and effectively enhance the San Pablo Avenue business district as a whole and on a scale appropriate to the city we actually live in. It would also avoid the authoritarianism which too frequently mars attempts to implement current redevelopment plans.

In short: we have a redevelopment approach that has not worked well over the dozen years. It's time to recognize that a different approach would serve us better.

National media drop the ball on El Salvador

Editor:

I want to thank reporter Krista Wood for her article "An Attorney's Terrifying Abduction," April 13, about our delegation's detention by Salvadoran security forces. Since the Salvadoran national elections March 19, in-depth coverage of that country's struggle by the major media has drastically fallen off. It is heartening to see a local newspaper reflect its readers' concerns by examining a critical aspect of foreign policy.

The article contained one error, however, which should be corrected to avoid confusion. Major Sena, who played an important role in our detention, was a U.S. military adviser disguised as a Salvadoran army officer, not a member of the liberation front as reported in your article.

Through Sena's actions and those of Vice-Consul Raymond Dillon, the U.S. government was complicit in every aspect of our detention including exposure to unsafe travel through conflictive areas at night, subjection to psychological terror and deportation.

At no time did the U.S. State Department act to protect our rights or lives, even when its inaction meant exposing us to gunplay by the Treasury Police.

Outrageous as our treatment was, Salvadorans endure daily worse abuse every day at the hands of the political party power. Linked conclusively death squad activity, this party ARENA, controls the legislature, the judiciary and, on June 1, the presidency of El Salvador.

Nine hundred thirty-three assassinations and disappearances were reported the first three months of this year. U.S. citizens should oppose our government's participation in this atrocity and demand an end to U.S. aid to Salvador.

CHP offers instruction in Mace use

Members of organizations in the El Cerrito-Albany area can secure the state permit to possess tear gas (Mace) for self-defense by completing a two-hour California Department of Justice training course, conducted at a location selected by the group. The group must consist of at least 20 persons.

Arrangements for courses can be made by phoning the instructor, Gary Cooper, a California Highway Patrol Officer who is a specialist in crime prevention and self-defense, at 524-5065. Course fee is $19, payable at the class.

Approximately 650,000 Californians have gotten tear gas permits. To receive a tear gas permit a person must be at least 16 years of age. However, persons 16 and 17 must secure consent forms to be signed by a parent or adult guardian. In California, the following persons cannot possess tear gas:

- Persons who have been convicted of a felony.
- Persons who have been convicted of any crime involving assault.
- Persons who are addicted to the use of narcotics.
- Persons who have been convicted of the misuse of tear gas.
- Daylight-saving time does not reduce the risk of criminal assault, said Cooper. The risk increases because of the sharp increase in the number of persons engaged in outdoor activities during longer daylight hours.

At the conclusion of a course state-approved tear gas devices can be purchased.

Groups which have arranged tear gas courses include neighborhood associations, employees, service clubs, women's organizations, fraternal organizations, professional societies and church groups. One individual should serve as course coordinator. For information call 524-5065.

Police Report

Dog a suspect in chewed paper, hose crimes

ALBANY — The following is a partial account of recent crimes and incidents that occurred in Albany, according to police records.

● A Madison Street woman reported April 26 that an angry neighbor continues to verbally assault her and her kids.

● A Carmel Street woman reported April 26 that someone had destroyed her garden hose and three times in the last month her morning paper had been cut up. Neighbors say the offender is a stray boxer "who runs loose at night, chews up paper and garden hoses," according to the police report.

● A transient was arrested for causing $200 in damage when he pushed a large bus bench over April 26. Afterward, he was observed walking around clenching and unclenching his fists and shouting at passing motorists.

● An 85-year-old woman experiencing a dizzy spell in the middle of the night April 26 fell and could not get back up. She crawled around until morning when her neighbors discovered her. Police managed to get into the house using bolt cutters. The woman was taken to Alta Bates Hospital.

● Two Berkeley residents lost some cash to a con man at Albany Bowl April 25. The victims purchased some packaged "low cost" electronic equipment only to find that the boxes contained rocks.

● An employee at a yogurt shop reported seeing a woman in her 40s shoving a young boy into her car April 24. Police contacted the woman, who turned out to be the boy's mother. She told police her son was upset because he didn't get an ice cream cone.

● A San Pablo Avenue pizza parlor reported a customer called to complain that a meal she had taken home was not what she ordered. An employee drove to the woman's El Cerrito house and showed her the order receipt. He said she became angry and said she would sue for "false advertising."

● A convenience store manager reported April 23 that four girls had taken a bag of cookies. Police stopped the girls with the cookies on Solano Avenue. The store manager arrived on the scene and identified the suspects, who were taken to the police station.

● Police found a man on San Pablo Avenue with his pants down around his ankles, his shoes and socks off and his shirt undone. He "could not explain his attire," and fled from police, according to the report.

● A Carmel Street resident reported that a Domino's delivery truck driver was "driving recklessly" and had run over a neighbor's cat April 20. The driver, a 20-year-old Oakland man, said the cat ran out in front of the truck. Police have had a number of complaints concerning fast or reckless driving by delivery personnel and they plan to issue citations in the future, according to the report.

Teacher's 37-year tenure spanned Truman to Bush

Phyllis Lyon

Scholar and gentleman Charles Clarke will depart the hallowed halls of Albany High School for good in June, leaving a spot difficult to fill. Clarke retires from a 37-year teaching stint at Albany.

Although he gained the respect and admiration of students and fellow teachers through the years, Clarke is not a typical Mr. Chips. Known as a tough but understanding teacher, he demands and gets the students' best work.

"Charlie is shy and retiring," said Gene Davis, Albany High School teacher. "He's the wise member of the tribe, the shaman. Though he's a lot more reserved now, he's always been an outspoken fighter for what he believes in, a strong advocate for teachers."

"We'll miss his unique and irreplaceable perspective," Davis said. "No one can replace him." Clarke, now head of the history department, said, "I've run the gamut of subjects over the years." Since coming to Albany High in 1952 he has taught American government, U.S. and world history, geography, economics, psychology and English. He coached varsity and junior varsity football for 12 years, basketball for 15 years and track for 17 years.

Born in 1929 near the Wyoming-Utah border in the Rocky Mountains, Clarke moved

'He's the wise senior member of the tribe, the shaman' with his family to Chico in 1936. After graduating from Chico State College, he came to Berkeley to do graduate work, began to teach in Albany and the rest is history.

Reflecting on changes in society since 1952, Clarke said, "When I started teaching, Truman was president, there was a police action in Korea and the McCarthy era was starting — quite a span of history."

"The big contrast between then and now is in what society values, how we spend our time. I'm disturbed about the low quality of the people who've become heroes — Ollie North, Donald Trump, Madonna. I'm a throwback. I just tolerate the direction in which things seem to be going."

"Kids are kids," he said of his hundreds of students. "But I've stayed in Albany because of the high quality of the students. There are more distractions from schoolwork today, but incorrigible kids are rare here."

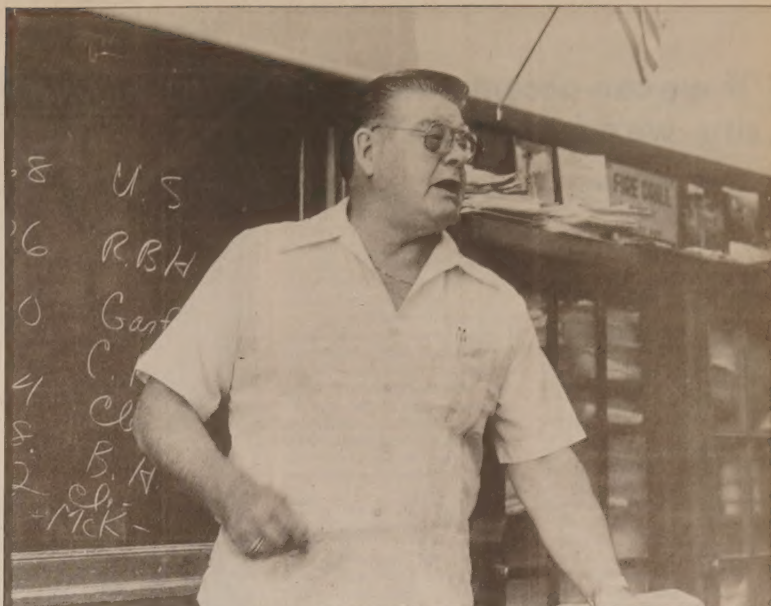

Long active in the Albany Teachers Association, Clarke was president for seven years and chairman of the original negotiating committee. The teachers at Albany High began collective bargaining in 1978.

"Before that it was 'meet and confer'," Clarke said. "But teachers were at the mercy of the board and the administration for salary and working conditions. Collective bargaining has greatly improved the quality of teachers' lives."

Clarke disagrees with Superintendent J. Dale Hudson's recent proposal to change the bargaining process. "Beware of Trojan horses! We've tried other methods but any time the basic process is changed, the ATA loses power and the advantage goes to the district." He added, "I'm proud of any role I've had in strengthening the teachers' resolve to stand up for their rights."

David DeHart, who will be the new chairman of the history department next fall, did his master teacher training under Clarke seven years ago. "The kids like Charlie a lot," he said. "He has the biggest of hearts when it comes to lending a helping hand and a wonderful sense of humor. I'll always remember the good advice he gave me when I was starting out."

"Charlie deserves a medal for hanging in there so long," said retired Albany coach and longtime Clarke friend, Bill Savage.

Journal — Mark Koehler

Longtime Albany teacher and union activist Charles Clarke retires

The Clarkes, who have three grown children, love to travel and plan a trip to Europe in the fall.

"I'm yearning to put my experiences and thoughts on paper," said Clarke who plans to read, write and play golf with his wife. "I'm melancholy but exhilarated by the prospect before me. I look forward to just kicking back."

Clarke's friends and colleagues will celebrate his retirement with a dinner dance June 3 at the Alameda Naval Air Station Officers Club. Teachers David DeHart and Bob Allegretti, co-chairmen of the event, ask Clarke's many friends and admirers to, as their flyer says, "Join Charlie on his final approach to the glide path of the endless summer."

'If we can accommodate the city, we'd love to do that'

Because the two groups both have a legal interest in the site, their cooperation is essential to plan effectively for an expanded city library.

The school district owns the 51-by-203 foot lot on which the library stands. Since the city had no public library back in 1951, the district leased the space to the city "for the erection, completion and maintenance thereon of a city of Albany public library building." According to the terms of the lease, which runs through 2050, the city can only use the site for housing a library.

Several plans to expand the crowded building at 1216 Solano Ave. have been drawn up in recent years, but none appeared feasible for reasons such as providing adequate parking space on busy Solano Avenue.

Now that the city has paid $1.1 million to buy the 24,000-square-foot site of the former Albany hospital on Marin Avenue, City Council members have become especially eager to move ahead with planning for both a community center and a new, modern library at the site.

The city is already working with the San Francisco architectural firm of Marquis Associates to develop a master plan for the former hospital building at 1247 Marin Ave. The planning and design process is scheduled to continue over the next three to five months.

One city concern is that the total cost of the project and whether it is finished in 18 months or completed in phases over five years depends largely on what funding sources the city can count on.

So far the city has access to enough funding—about $700,000 in bond proceeds and block grants—to complete the community center portion of the Marin site, according to Councilmember William Lewis, who chairs the city's Library/Community Center Advisory Committee.

To give the library half of the Marin Avenue project the best possible chance for a thorough and timely completion, the council has lately been pressing the school board to revise the terms of the lease that restrict city use of the current site of the library.

Ideally, the city would like to be in a position to rent out the space at the prime Solano Avenue location to help generate some of the approximately $1 million needed to remodel a 12,000-square-foot library site on Marin Avenue, alongside the planned community center.

City officials are also getting ready to apply this fall for a share of the $75 million in Proposition 85 funds that the legislature will award early next year to selected library construction projects throughout the state.

The city's case for getting the largest possible matching share of state funds would be stronger, many city officials believe, if the city could show that it has access to a reliable source of income, such as Solano Avenue rental property, to ensure successful completion of the library project.

Consequently, some city officials are upset that the school district has not agreed to make such a source of income available.

"We're getting very angry that we're not getting anything out of the schools," Councilmember Lewis said. "We need some commitment from the school district."

Similar sentiments were expressed by Councilmembers Nichols, Thelma Rubin and Mayor Henry Kruse at a recent joint meeting of the City Council and the school board.

Whatever rush the city may now be in to solidify its plans to finance and expand the library, the school district's position is that it must carefully consider future district needs, especially for extra classroom space, before agreeing to any revisions in the terms of the current library lease.

The district has told the city that it is in the process of reviewing options on how to make room for an additional four classes of students in the fall and for increasing numbers of children in the near future.

Books and materials are squeezed into every corner of the Albany Library

"I would think that across the summer or by early next fall the school board should be in a position to make a definite statement about the lease," said Superintendent J. Dale Hudson. The board could "respond very specifically" at that time, the district's top administrator predicted. "If we can accommodate the city, we'd love to do that."

"They (city officials) have to understand where our responsibilities lie," said Boardmember Sally Outis. "We need to put together a proposal we can all live with," she said, adding that school officials "have not closed the door on using the site for income. Board members would be more than happy to look over a proposal" from the city.

At least one proposed draft of a revised lease did not make board members happy. They reviewed what the city considered reasonable changes in the lease—a "modest modification" in Mayor Kruse's words—at an Oct. 25, 1988 board meeting.

"It (the revised lease) was simply not acceptable in what it required from the school district," Outis said.

Minutes from that board meeting indicate that Outis' fellow board members agreed: "vague, general language through the revision" was a source of board dissatisfaction with the city's proposal, according to the minutes. The board also questioned the city's proposed "5/6 city-1/6 district" split of revenue that might be earned from the property.

The minutes also indicate that one possible school district strategy would be to buy the city's leasehold and its library building, assuming adequate funds could be found.

That would put the school district in control of how to use the site for its future needs. Such a buy-out would also presumably leave the city with a worthwhile sum of money for its purposes. The two groups have not ruled out the possibility of sharing whatever income could be generated from an alternate use of the Solano Avenue site.

Exactly how well the city and school district have been able to communicate their respective preferences for revising the library lease is unclear. At the April 4 joint meeting Councilmember Nichols was adamant that the school district is dragging its feet on the issue.

"To negotiate, one must respond. We went for months without a response to comments and suggestions we've made to the school board" on how to finance the library expansion.

Superintendent Hudson disagreed. "We have answered anything the city has provided."

If no changes in the current lease are agreed to, the city may choose to continue its library operations at the current site, while moving the library operations to its Marin Avenue building. At the request, library staff has already come up with a preliminary proposal for splitting the library between the two sites.

A two-site library would likely mean leaving children's services on Solano Avenue and moving adult, young adult and reference services to the new Marin Avenue location.

"I hope this doesn't happen," said branch manager Davis. "I'm making the assumption that the school district and the city will come to some agreement."

Economist warns about the Bay Area's school systems

CONCORD—The chief economist for Pacific Gas and Electric Co. said recently the Bay Area could become an economic "Rust Belt" if nothing is done to improve local grade school and high school education.

Tapan Munroe compared the situation to the midwestern "Rust Belt" states that lost much of their steel and auto industry to foreign competitors. He said the Bay Area could lose its share of the lucrative high-tech industry if it cannot supply an educated workforce.

Munroe said business leaders are "profoundly concerned" by the low level of literacy and basic skills among entry level workers emerging from the school system. "We can't take our affluence and the lifestyle we have now for granted unless we do something about education," he said.

The PG&E economist spoke in Concord April 19 at a conference sponsored by the Contra Costa County Office of Education to encourage businesses to enter into partnerships with the schools.

Munroe said the personal involvement of business people in efforts such as the county's Regional Occupational Programs can help upgrade the workforce.

Proposition 13 has hurt educational efforts by decreasing the tax base, he said. But the retention of manufacturing industries is also threatened because schools and colleges have not emphasized the importance of manufacturing, he said.

The vision of a prosperous post-industrial society in the United States that depends mainly on service jobs is an illusion, according to Munroe.

He said 40 to 50 percent of the high-income jobs in the service sector are linked to the presence of manufacturing in the region.

Bay Area colleges and universities are among the best in the world, but California ranks at the bottom of the list in per-student expenditures in the grade schools and secondary schools, he said. "In 1989, the number one national defense issue is not building the B-1 bomber," he said. "It is the education of our children in kindergarten through the 12th grade."

Gary Pokorny, 46, comes to El Cerrito after 10 years as city manager in Corvallis, Ore. He replaces former city manager Ron Creagh

Pokorny

The arrangement, which calls for the city to make a $175,000 cash contribution toward the home's purchase was criticized by some residents. Among them Bob Winslow, who reminded the council it had voted for a benefit assessment last June to keep from depleting city reserves.

Pokorny, who is entering his third week on the job, said he hadn't expected the house issue to become the first controversy of his tenure here.

But he added, "I suppose in retrospect it's not surprising. I guess this is the first time it's been invoked in El Cerrito, though it's fairly extensively used elsewhere in the Bay Area."

After nine years as city manager of Corvallis, Ore., Pokorny, 46, was asked to resign by an entirely new city council and mayor who had just taken office.

The new members accused him of withholding information in preparing packets for council meetings.

"I think they wanted to make a complete change," said Pokorny, who acknowledged that there had been some controversy and criticism of his management style.

"If you do anything, there are people who are going to criticize you," he said. "If you're in the public sector you have to expect it."

"Oh sure, there's things I would do different. If I had the chance. Some things I would have done sooner, or in a different way."

In particular, Pokorny said, his office "probably didn't do as good a job of communicating with the citizens as we might have," relying too much on local media in Corvallis, a city of some 43,000.

Overall, however, he said he is proud of what the city accomplished during his nine years on the job.

"The letters and calls of complaint always outnumber the good ones," Pokorny said.

Some of the criticism, cited in local newspaper stories, stemmed from a $30 million retail center in Corvallis that was not completed because costs grew too high.

The failed development, Pokorny said, was an urban renewal project that was already under way when he took the city manager's post in 1978.

By 1982, he said, the council had decided against pursuing the project further.

"I think it was the right decision," Pokorny said. "I don't think it could have been done any sooner."

The city was caught between one faction that wanted the project and another that questioned why the money was being spent at all, he said.

"They had to take planning to a certain point before they could decide," Pokorny said. "It was somewhat controversial at the time."

Pokorny anticipates likewise that El Cerrito's major redevelopment projects now lumbering along will be a source of conflict.

"Redevelopment is a very difficult and emotional process," he said. "It affects different people in radically different ways. Some may welcome it and others may not like it because it implies change."

Pokorny said that he, city staff and elected officials will have to listen to a lot of varied community input on the process and then "try to make some reasonable judgment — which is the tough part — over how we should proceed."

He said "almost invariably when you make a tough decision, you hear about it."

Revising the city budget will mean more tough decisions, he said, calling the issue El Cerrito's "No. 1 problem, as it has been for some years."

There are no easy answers to balancing the constraints of the city budget with the desired level of city services, Pokorny said. "I told the council that during our interview."

The budget is simply determining "what you want and what you are willing to pay for," he said. "We have to look at a number of sectors and determine what we want our community to look like."

When he came to Corvallis, Pokorny said, the community was "very badly polarized" into pro-growth and anti-growth elements.

"Over time I think I was able to help them communicate with each other to accomplish the things they wanted to see done."

El Cerrito, Pokorny said, is different since it is mostly built out and is "quite endowed with open space."

But the same sort of consensus-building will be necessary here for the city to resolve its problems, he said.

house for new City Manager Gary Pokorny.

The new arrangement gives the city a 46.1 percent share of the $325,000 house's equity and 53.9 percent to Pokorny and his family.

The city's cash contribution will be $150,000. Pokorny will contribute $165,000 (a 54 percent equity share), including $110,000 of the purchase price from lenders.

The arrangement works under the assumption that the house will appreciate to a value of $500,000 in five years, about the period of time Pokorny has said he expects to stay on as city manager.

If the house does reach that value in five years, the city's interest in the house will be $230,000 and the city manager's will be $270,000.

Library

Although two sites would give the library more space, Davis said there would be other complications.

Because library resources and staff would remain in their current level, library hours would have to be divided between the two buildings. Thus each site might have to be open for half a day or on alternate days.

"This means that patrons using one building would not only have to go to the other building to use the rest of the library's resources, but also would have to wait until the other facility was open," according to comments in the preliminary plan given to the city.

Other disadvantages noted in the proposed two-site plan include such situations as when "adults coming to the Children's Library with children would not be able to browse or check out materials for themselves." Similar complications would arise for adults who take children with them to adult sections at a Marin Avenue library.

"The library staff strongly feels that a divided library will result in poorer quality service to the community," the preliminary proposal says.

After district and city differences on library planning surfaced at the recent joint meeting, a city council/school board committee was formed earlier this month "to work on issues of mutual interest" on a one-year trial basis.

The committee is not slated to meet before July.

requirements. While those built before 1958 already meet existing standards, they must register with the Planning and Zoning commission to become legal.

A "sunset clause" will give owners one year to comply with the new amendments.

The revisions will allow smaller homes of 3,750 square feet to build second units, reducing the requirement from 4,000 square feet.

Detached secondary units, however, must have a setback area from side and back yard lines of about one-tenth the lot width. New units must also have two parking spots set aside for their specific use.

"Last time we didn't have a list of those violating. This time we do," Councilmember Ed McManus said.

A school parcel tax passed in 1988 generated a list of unregistered secondary units that will now be targeted by the new ordinance for compliance.

Albany resident Evan Flavell opposed the changes. "If the city passes this ordinance it will add to ... the confusion and inequity that exists."

Warning that the city could become crowded with these units, Nichols said "people are going to start making secondary units" en masse.

Nichols, who cast the only dissenting vote, said a way to ease overcrowding is to "get the caterpillars out there and to the scene and tear down some of these places."

But according to Planning and Zoning Commissioner Ann Berry, second units are the most affordable housing in town. "Some (tenants) have lived in them for 40 years. It would be heartless to close some of them down."

Flavell claimed realtors advertise homes as having secondary unit potential, which is illegal. But Albany realtor Jerome Blank defended his profession saying that a realtor must be completely candid about illegal structures, because the broker could be sued.

McManus asked the audience if "realtors would start bootlegging secondary housing?"

"I'm sure that the real estate agents know better," Berry said, although dissenting audience members claimed that it is a common practice.

Under the new proposal, second units must have been used continuously since 1958 to be legalized.

In another amendment, the size of Albany signs must now be relative to the size of their store fronts, not the size of the stores. Shopping center signs will be required to have a large "master sign."

Dario Meniketti described the Albany Towne Centre shopping center sign as "one of the ugliest things I've ever seen" and claimed that it obstructed traffic.

But owner Jerome Blank defended his 47-foot sign, constructed just a few years ago. "(It resembles) a classical bell tower such as you might see in Venice."

One man's junk is another's hood ornament

By Peter Hegarty
Special to The Journal

Harrod Blank was born free and born to ride — and he lets the world know it.

Just look at his 1965 Volkswagen bug. You can't miss it. And guaranteed you will look twice.

Painted a rainbow of colors, with a smashed television on the roof, plastic fruit on the bumper and a globe on the hood, Blank's car is a work of art. Literally.

In fact, it is a rolling philosophy statement.

He calls it "Oh, My God." "People come up and say 'What is it?'" Blank explains. "But usually, when people see it, I get drilled with an 'Oh, My God.' So that is what I call it."

When Blank bought the car for $600 it was solid white. Now, seven psychedelic years later, each object on it is a symbol.

The broken television, for instance, represents violence on the airwaves. The globe is for the universe. The plastic fruit dangling from the bumper symbolizes life.

"Over the years it has grown to where it is now," Blank says. "It's always changing, always evolving. It's like some kind of creature."

On the car's trunk, plastic rats scurry amid two plastic babies holding hands. Blank spells their message nearby.

"Overpopulation...Earth Control...Safe Sex."

Above the words a bumper sticker reads "Abolish Apartheid." By the driver's door, "peace" is spelled in a dozen languages.

"This car engages you," Blank says. "You are not just another car on the road. You have to interact with people, and they must interact with you."

Last Sunday, Blank parked his creation on University Avenue in Berkeley. Traffic soon slowed and pedestrians made a full stop.

"Outstanding, really outstanding," said cab driver John Delmos. "It shows how boring most cars are. Today you can't tell the difference between a Toyota and a Mercedes. Things are too homogenized."

Blank's vehicle is car art, a form whose works include autos covered in fruit or dead fish and oozemobiles, which feature pink globes of dripping urethane.

Their creators, and their marvelous, rollicking, I've-got-to-be-me expressions are being documented by Blank in his upcoming film Wild Wheels.

"When I started work on my car I had never seen one like it," He hopes the documentary will publicize the art form.

An aspiring actor and filmmaker, Blank, 26, has appeared in Treetop Memories and Killer Klowns From Outer Space, both low-budget dramas.

His car, though, was featured in In the Land of the Owl Turds. The film, made by Blank, concerns a man dyed green who feels rejected by Santa Cruz society. He flees to the mountains.

The story is autobiographical. Blank used to dye himself green whenever he felt an outcast, like at his graduation ceremony in theater arts from U.C. Santa Cruz in 1986.

"I did it because I felt like an alien. So if I felt like an alien I might as well look like one."

"But I don't feel like an alien any more. I feel like a normal person. I guess I'm getting used to society."

A Los Angeles native who has lived in the East Bay a year, Blank credits art for the change.

"I think the car is a form of catharsis."

Along with his documentary and the housepainting he does between film jobs, Blank is working another project.

It's a '68 Rambler and its theme will be "From Death Comes Life." The car will include skulls, a flourishing garden and a rising phoenix.

Blank is also searching for a museum to house the Volkswagen. Until then, he revises it.

"I'm trying to get the car so that it's perfect, so that it's like a poem."

And since Blank's first work grew from alienation, the second will reflect his current optimism.

"I feel alive. These cars make you engaged. Things happen."

For more information on Harrod Blank's videos contact Flower Films, 10341 San Pablo Ave., El Cerrito, 94530. Or call 525-0942.

The special rate will be in effect during that week and for a short while after. Purina's "Pet Parent" program also includes an educational element to be made available to teachers and consists of lessons in the care and feeding of pets.

To participate call 845-7735. People can volunteer for the walk-a-thon, make a pledge to a walker of bring the kids in to adopt a new animal.

St. John's School receives grant from Chevron Corp.

EL CERRITO — A donation of $750 from the Chevron Employee Involvement Fund has been made to St. John's School to provide eight Lawrence Hall of Science workshops for students in grades 1 through 8.

The workshops are conducted by teachers from the Chemistry Department of the Lawrence Hall of Science. Projects include Monster, Crystals, grade 7 and 8; Fast Cereal Analysis, grades

5 and 6; Crime Lab Chemistry, grades 3 and 4; and Bubble-ology, grades 1 and 2.

The Chevron Employee Involvement Fund donation was given to the school in recognition of the work of Chevron employees at St. John's. They are active in programs such as judging the science fair, classroom aides and parent-teacher group programs.

St. John's school is at 11156 San Pablo Ave., El Cerrito.

Casablanca gets four stars

Chamber People

Albany Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Hal Denham is recovering from surgery at Alta Bates Hospital. He expects to be back on the job shortly.

Winning a Swiss gold watch and chain for being the best dressed man in a Gay Nineties costume was Davey Jones of Davey Jones Locker. Jones was being honored by the Veteran's Hospital in Martinez for his volunteer work. He wore a 100-year-old top beaver hat, tuxedo, tails and black dance shoes at a dinner dance honoring all hospital volunteers.

The chamber thanks Joe Kelly of K&S Realty for donating two file cabinets and new lights for the newly renovated conference room.

One of the leading restaurant critics in the Bay Area reviewed the Casablanca Bar & Grill, giving it a four-star rating. The chamber is proud of its owner, Hashim Tabatabaee.

Chamber President William Johns appointed Jewel Okawachi (D&S Composing Service) to the Albany Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention Council. Fern Luoma (Luoma Photography) will be the alternate. Luoma will also head the annual dinner to be held in July. Todd Armstrong (Armstrong and Armstrong Insurance) will chair the Program and Membership Committee. Serving with him are Elisabeth Bell (Bank of America), and Kelly and Mary Weiland (East Bay Paint Center).

The first phase of the chamber's office renovation is completed, according to Pam Tennenbaum (NTT Travel), renovation chairperson. There are new light fixtures and a dropped T-bar ceiling and the office was painted throughout. The second phase will be putting new carpet and new chairs in the conference room.

New Business

Maurice Newburn, owner of M.C. Newburn Books, has been in the bookstore business all of his adult life, starting when he attended San Francisco State right out of high school. He recently opened the bookstore in Albany's Town Center with books from "art to zoology." To repay his college expenses, Newburn started to work at a bookstore at San Francisco State. He liked it so much he stayed in the book business, and has worked as a stock clerk, retail clerk, sales representative and now an owner.

El Cerrito man accepts award for local guidance consortium

EL CERRITO — Earle Carr of the Bay Area Guidance Consortium and an El Cerrito resident was recently notified that his organization is one of 15 nominees for the prestigious H.D. McDaniel group award.

The award, given in honor of the late Dr. H.D. McDaniel, Stanford professor and counselor educator, recognizes a group or team of counselors who have developed and carried out an exemplary program in guidance and counseling. The award will be presented at the 16th annual McDaniel conference to be held June 29 through July 1 at Stanford University.

Carr worked in the Richmond

Unified School District for 35 years in the capacity of teacher, counselor and administrator before retiring in 1982. That same year he came to work part-time for the Contra Costa County Office of Education as a special consultant in the area of counseling and guidance.

The Bay Area Guidance Consortium is a 10-county consortium that meets monthly to promote counseling and guidance activities within the schools. They host two conferences a year for counselors of grades kindergarten through 12. The consortium was founded in 1982 and is composed of 12 members from 10 different counties throughout the states.

"Celebrate Spring with the Arts" is the theme of Oakland's popular SPRING FINE ARTS FESTIVAL coming May 5, 6 and 7 to Lakeshore Avenue. The sidewalk becomes a colorful marketplace as professional artists from the Bay Area set up their works for display at the semi-annual event. The exhibits include paintings, watercolors, etchings, photographs, jewelry and a wide selection of other arts and crafts. The show runs Friday through Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Sponsored by the Lakeshore Merchants, this sidewalk show and sale is a popular spring event. Local artists exhibiting are printmaker Ruth Sipper of Oakland and Berkeley serigrapher, Hisao Yokota. Coming a bit further for the show will be black and white photographer Steve Snyder from Idaho and Washington jeweler Alan Heugh.

Highlighting this year's spring gala is Santa Rosa artist and jeweler Terri Dennis. Though Terri has functioned in many aspects of the art world since graduation from art college including design, commercial illustration and advertising, her current love is handmade one-of-a-kind jewelry which she will be showing at the Lakeshore Art Festival.

These bright, modern miniature pieces grew out of experimentation with collage work. Seeing the beauty and impact of the collage work led her to work smaller and come up with the unusual jewelry which has brought her so much current popularity.

The handmade cotton-rag papers are cut or torn by hand into their specific shapes, individually painted and the different shapes and papers combined into miniature pieces of art. The stones and glitter are then applied and finally, for durability and water resistance, a patented glaze is applied to all exposed surfaces.

There are over 10 steps involved in the creation of just one piece of jewelry, all done by hand. Because of this, no two can ever be alike and each piece is a small work of original art.

Terri Dennis will be at the Lakeshore Avenue Spring Festival along with 30 other professional artists to meet and speak with the public. The Festival is free.

At news briefing

Richmond residents burned up over waste

Bay City News

RICHMOND — Richmond residents and Greenpeace members raked state health officials over the coals last week during a news briefing on hazardous waste incinerators.

The briefing was billed as an informational session for reporters on the environmental review and permit process for proposed incineration facilities.

Two members of the West County Toxics Coalition said they lost faith in the regulatory agencies because they believed Richmond residents were wrongly told that the crude oil burned during an explosion and fire at Chevron April 10 contained no toxic compounds.

Greenpeace member Bradley Angel accused the officials of misrepresenting facts concerning the agencies' past performance in controlling toxic discharges.

Representatives of the state Department of Health Services, the Bay Area Air Quality Management District and the Environmental Protection Agency struggled to explain how different agencies on the local, state and federal levels share responsibility for the regulation of hazardous waste disposal.

Members of the citizens' groups repeatedly challenged the officials' statements and engaged them in debate over their records in defending the public from pollutants.

Three existing hazardous waste incinerators in Richmond, Martinez and at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratories must receive EPA permits by November or shut down.

The regulatory agencies are also considering applications for three new incinerators in Pittsburg, Martinez and Livermore. Howard Hatayama of the Department of Health Services said incineration is the best method now available for the disposal of hazardous wastes because current technology makes it possible to destroy 99.99 percent of the harmful compounds.

Hatayama said the level of toxic exposure the public would experience would cause at most one additional cancer case for every one million people.

Henry Clark of the West County Toxics Coalition challenged these projections, citing the high rate of cancer in Richmond and past statements by regulatory agencies that plants located there are safe.

"Do you come out and talk to people in the community or do you just sit behind a desk somewhere and fiddle around with a computer and come up with some number?" Clark asked.

Steven Hill of the Bay Area Air Quality Management District said data on the expected performance of an incinerator is based on computer models, but once the facility is built it must meet government standards in a "test burn" and in subsequent periodic reviews.

The officials said each incinerator permit will also contain requirements for waste minimization programs and emergency response plans at each facility.

Hill said the current exposure to toxic pollutants in the Bay Area is 1,000 times higher than recommended levels, and residents in Richmond share the same high level of cancer risk borne by all Bay Area communities.

Hill estimated that one in four area residents will develop cancer.

But, he said, incinerators operating under current government guidelines would not add significantly to the dangers of toxic substances from all sources.

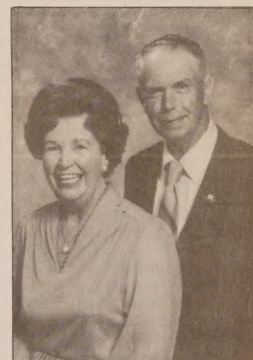

Although six of the 14 incinerator permit applications now pending in California would locate facilities in Alameda or Contra Costa counties, Hill said no limit has been set on the maximum number of incinerators that will be given permits in the East Bay.

Hatayama said waste minimization is the state's highest priority. But he said the Health Services Department does not have the authority to set standards or timetables to force industry to reduce its use and generation of hazardous compounds.

The department funds demonstration projects and educational efforts to encourage industry to reduce the total amount of toxic waste that will need to go to disposal facilities, he said.

New environmental regulations limit the kinds of wastes that can be disposed of at landfills, Hatayama said, and current high dumping rates create an economic incentive for industry to cut down on the production of toxics.

Hill said that although incineration of hazardous materials will never be without risk, "the other things that can happen to those chemicals in many cases are worse."

El Cerrito pair celebrates 50th anniversary

EL CERRITO — A 50th wedding anniversary celebration was held at the Open House Senior Center in El Cerrito in honor of Emil and Winifred Johnson on April 8

The event was hosted by their son Steve Johnson and his wife Betty, and was attended by 90 relatives and friends. Their son Donald Johnson, flew from New York for the party.

Champagne and punch were served with hors d'oeuvres followed by a buffet and cake. Several friends and relatives came from out of town to attend. The Johnsons have lived in El Cerrito since 1940. Mr. Johnson worked for Pabco Corp. and Mrs. Johnson has worked as an Avon representative for many years.

Mr. Johnson served in the Navy during World War II and is an avid golfer. They raised three sons, Steve, David and Donald. Mr. Johnson belongs to the VFW and the Eagles.

WEST WIND CAFE

On University Avenue in Berkeley, the West Wind Cafe is serving homestyle breakfast and lunch in an atmosphere that could be called Berkeley Traditional. Traditional in the sense that music and art are as integral to the environment as the wonderful food.

The menu consists of local favorites such as three-grain pancakes made with buckwheat, cornmeal and whole wheat served with pure maple syrup and your choice of ham or sausage from the side order menu. Or perhaps your taste runs to the more "Untraditional Feast," which is sauteed vegetables and tofu with melted cheddar cheese served with homefries, sour cream, toast or homemade muffin.

Lunch includes avocado or mushroom cheeseburgers on sourdough rolls with all the trimmings; Hawaiian chicken salad on wheat bread; the famous West Wind burger and of course a selection of soup and salad.

Home cooking in my hometown — this is also a great place to meet friends for your morning latte or espresso or that ice cold glass of unfiltered apple juice in a completely non-smoking environment.

The West Wind Cafe is open every day but Tuesday from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. for breakfast and lunch. They are located at 1717-A University Ave., near McGee. Telephone 843-4411.

ALI'S

The beauty, grace and elegance of North Africa and the Middle East can be found at the newly opened Ali's in Kensington. The incredible interior design is only an introduction to this culinary cultural experience that can be described as Moroccan Romantic.

Opened just a month ago, the menu boasts the finest in cuisines from Tunisia, Algiers, Morocco and the Middle East. Meals begin with a delightful assortment of Mezza which can include: harira, a traditional soup; pil pil, sauteed prawns with fresh herbs and tomatoes; and kabenaya, ground lean lamb, seasoned with spices and served raw like steak tartare, with pita bread.

Entrees include from the grill: shish taouk, grilled filet of chicken breast in lemon juice, basil and olive oil, and rack of lamb. Other specialties are braised and include chicken oas, braised chicken in honey sauce with Medjool dates; Tagine Saudi, braised lamb with tomato and okra; and Tagine Jerusalem, chunks of lamb braised with Jerusalem artichokes.

In addition to these dishes there are many couscous, curry and vegetarian dishes that will delight your palate and make your evening at Ali's unforgettable.

This exciting new restaurant is located at 385 Colusa Avenue, in Kensington and open seven days a week. The bar opens at 4 p.m. and dinner is served at 5 p.m. For additional information and reservations call 526-1500.

LE DUCK DE BEIJING

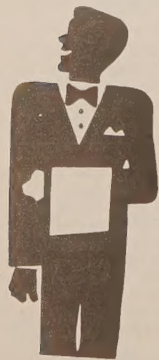

Located not far from Jack London Square in Oakland is Le Duck De Beijing. The restaurant, celebrating its first anniversary, has already gathered a steady stream of regular customers who have come to expect the best in Beijing and Hunan gourmet food.

During their first year they sold more than 12,000 traditional Beijing ducks to their customers in addition to many other meals that range from chow mein and fried rice dishes to Szechwan beef and sizzling ginger oysters.

Duck dinners are served in the Beijing tradition. The chef brings the meal to the table and slices the meat for you and your party.

Private rooms are available with advance reservations and there is a new dining area complete with dance floor, a stage for live music and a small bar.

Le Duck De Beijing is open for lunch and dinner Monday through Friday 11 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday 10:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. The restaurant is located at 310-314 Broadway near Jack London Square. The phone numbers for reservations and additional information are 832-1545 and 832-3888.

Despite quick returns like the one by El Cerrito's Howard Tan, the Yellowjackets spiked the Gauchos 3-2 last week.

Gauchos baseball

A struggle to stay in race

By Don August

The Journal

EL CERRITO — The El Cerrito Gauchos are managing to stay above water despite having some shaky play lately. They split their two games last week, keeping their league race at hand and keeping pace the best they can.

At the start of the week the Gauchos won the hard way over the Berkeley Yellowjackets but later fell to De La Salle.

In play against Berkeley the Gauchos jumped to a quick 6-0 lead only to see it disappear in one inning.

After scoring once in the second inning, they put up three runs in the third. After zinging in a mighty triple, Chris Williams scored on an RBI single by Andre Thomas. Thomas then scored on a Kurt Hunt double and the lead was 3-0. Moments later, Tiayadi Day singled home Hunt and El Cerrito had a 4-0 advantage. They scored another run in the fifth and once more in the sixth to lead 6-0. Things were looking good for the Gauchos until the Yellowjackets got their bats going.

Consecutive hits by Odeal Tryce, Deman Brown, Cory McCoy, Miles Magbe and Navato

Babbitt scored six runs for Berkeley. They tied the score, forcing the game into an eighth inning.

D'Vour Thurston walked, stole second and moved to third on a ground out by Chris Williams and he scored on a wild pitch. Then they broke the game open.

With two outs Sam Burnstein reached on an error, stole second and scored on a single by Hunt. Nate Brown was hit by a pitch and Day belted a single to finish the scoring.

The winning pitcher for the Gauchos was Todd Jackson. Offensively, Day led the way going 3 for 5 with two runs batted in. Kurt Hunt was 2 for 4 and Sam Burnstein was 2 for 5 with four stolen bases.

The momentum didn't carry over, however. The Gauchos lost to De La Salle

Twins, Dodgers take titles

First half of Albany Little League play comes to close

By Don August

The Journal

ALBANY — The races are now over in both the major and minor divisions and the results are enough to make any Irishman jolt. Both first-half victors sport green and both already have one of the Albany Little League season under their belts. The Twins and the Dodgers both used strong pitching this past week to clinch their division titles.

The Dodgers' pitchers Nate Gathegi, Danny Gross and Colin Sillers ran their shut-out streak to three consecutive innings, winning two more games in lopsided fashion. Their record was 8-1 when this story went to press. Although they have one game remaining, which will have been played by the time you read this, they hold an insurmountable lead of two games with one to play.

The shut-out streak began when Nate Gathegi blanked the Cardinals a week ago. Then, during the past week, Danny Gross and Colin Sillers threw shutouts at the Braves and Pirates, respectively.

The game against the Pirates saw the Dodgers ease their way to an 8-0 win. A four-run fourth did most of the damage; hits by Bryan Clancy, David Kotylar, Kyle Fleming and Colin Sillers spoiled the Pirates game to that point. Sillers' hit was the big one because it knocked in two runs.

For the Pirates, they could only manage three hits: two by Jeff McCulloch and one by Lupe Alcala. Pirate outfielder Gabriel Cano made the defensive play of the game as he ran hard to the foul ball fence and made a great catch against the wall for an out.

The Dodgers then did away with the Braves 7-0, thanks in large part to a six-run third highlighted by hits from Manton Hurd, Felipe Parker and Kyle Fleming. On the game, Tom Beckwith had a pair of doubles and also scored twice. Danny Gross went the distance allowing only two hits, one each by Dominic "Pee Wee" Palazzolo and Aubrey Holmes. Good defense was played at third by Tom Hughes and David Kotylar, each starting double plays, and at shortstop by Nate Gathegi.

Besides the Dodgers the other hot team in the division are the Giants, who rattled off two wins last week for their third straight and fourth win in the last five games.

First they defeated the Car-

Albany senior league

Competition heating up

By Don August

The Journal

ALBANY — There is quite a seasonal race brewing in the Albany senior league battle in the Albany Little League. After seven games of the young season the Braves and Mets top the standings with 5-2 records, but are closely pursued by the Mets and the Colts.

Last week's unpredictable games showed why this league is so much fun to watch.

Starting off the week the Braves Phils took on the top Mets and mainly because of Zack Aron, they got into the win column for the first time 4-1. Chun threw a one-hitter and struck out four batters. He got offensive help from Josh Aroner who had two runs and two runs batted in.

Next the Colts and Padres hooked up and were tied 7-7 when darkness halted play. The game will be resumed at a later date.

The Astros then took the field against the winless Reds and, on strong pitching of David Torres, downed the Reds 14-1. Torres, in fact threw a no-hitter against the Reds and got good support at the plate from Joe Pearse, Dyron Brewer and Nick Fox, all of whom had two hits for the winners.

The Padres got a win on Saturday, downing the Phils 8-2 behind the pitching of Roman Davis. He not only pitched effectively but got two hits as did Todd Carlock.

The Colts later ambushed the front running Astros 4-0, behind yet another great pitching performance. Matt King threw nothing but zeros on the scoreboard against the first-place team. Dyron Brewer pitched well in the loss.

Then came the game of the week. The Mets, trying to tie for first place, took on the Reds who were trying for their first win. The game was nothing like you might think it would be.

After the Reds took a 1-0 lead in the first, pitcher Dan Hennen ran into control problems and walked the bases loaded in the bottom of the first. With the Mets' power source, Clifford Coleman, at the plate Hennen came in with a fast ball.

Coleman figured it was coming and belted it to deep right field depositing it over the chain link monster in right for a grand slam.

Quickly the Mets were on top 4-1.

In the Reds' second, Matt Bailey again got the team rolling with a two-RBI double as the Reds scored five times to take a 6-4 lead. The Mets chipped away with runs in the second and third tying it at 6-6.

The Reds' fourth saw them score three more runs with a Michael Lewis double sending home a couple of runs. The Reds lead of 9-6 lasted until the fifth when Matt Sundstrom's three-run triple highlighted a seven-run outburst for the Mets.

Hits also by Coleman and David Merrill helped in the attack that saw the Mets jump back in from 13-9. The Mets scored another in the sixth to take a 14-9 lead heading into the final inning. Though the team was down by five, the Reds crowd figured something weird was about to happen.

Four walks and a few booted grounders set the Reds up with four runs in. Now they trailed 14-13 with two outs and the bases loaded. Up came rookie David Horton and on an 0-2 pitch, pitcher Coleman hit Horton in the jaw, forcing home the tying run. The magic didn't last, however. In the bottom of the seventh a bases-loaded single by David Merrill sent home Zack Gillen and the Mets escaped with their lives and a 15-14 win.

That puts the Astros and Mets in a 5-2 tie with the Padres and Colts right behind at 4-2. The Phils, 1-5, and the Reds, 0-6, round out the field.

Senior Minors

In the senior minors a very exciting weekend culminated in the two longest games in the league's history.

First up, the Seals and Stars did battle. The Seals came away 8-7 winners, putting them even with the Stars in the standings. Follow-

Albany girls come out of tough softball play with 1 win, 1 loss

By Don August

The Journal

ALBANY — The Albany High School girls' softball team found themselves in an unusual position last week. They were atop the standing in the East Shore Athletic League and their two scheduled games were against their main competition. Good pitching and tough play allowed them to split their games, still putting them among the leaders of the league.

First they matched up with Kennedy of Richmond and the Cougars came away 9-5 winners behind the pitching of Mary Lackey.

Lackey got the Cougars rolling in the first as she walked to start the Albany threat. After stealing second and third, Erin Billings walked and Angie Forrest came through with a single to put Albany ahead 1-0.

In the third the Cougars extended their lead which by then had turned into a 1-1 tie. Billings singled followed by a walk by Forrest. With both runners advancing on a steal, Anny Lackey came to the plate and drilled a two-run double into the outfield making the lead 3-1.

Mary Lackey continued strong on the mound, holding Kennedy scoreless in the third and fourth when Albany gave her more support in the fifth.

Mary Lackey continued strong on the mound

Anna Sikora led this one off with a single which was quickly followed by a single from Anny Lackey. Terri Madero walked to load the bases. As the Kennedy pitcher struggled with her control, the Cougars were the recipients of a few charity runs. Rachel Hitchcock walked, forcing in Sikora, and moments later Karen Texora walked to score Lackey.

The only run-scoring hit came by Amalia Castanon-Hill as she singled in Madero with the third run of the inning. The 6-1 lead seemed safe the way Mary Lackey was pitching but Kennedy came up with three runs in the fifth to draw closer at 6-4. That's when the Cougars put it away with three more in the sixth.

The sixth saw Billings again lead off the rally with a well-hit triple. A walk and stolen base by Forrest put two runners into scoring position. Sikora's single scored Billings for a 7-4 lead. Now with two outs, some clutch at bats came and again the Kennedy pitcher was wild. She walked Hitchcock, Texora and Shanta Frantz, scoring two more runs, finishing the scoring at 9-4.

Mary Lackey pitched all seven innings for the Cougars and for the eighth consecutive time was the pitcher of record. Her record, like the team's, was 6-2.

The momentum didn't carry over, however, when they battled Alameda for first place and came away 12-4 losers.

Offensive highlights saw Anny Lackey go 2 for 3 with a double and Anna Sikora belt a two-run homer in her 1 for 3 day.

Again Mary Lackey was the pitcher of record but she didn't get much help.

The standings entering this week of play show the Cougars' record at 6-3 just behind Alameda 6-2 and just ahead of Kennedy in a three-way battle for the title.

dinals 4-2 behind the pitching of Jeff Trenerly and Stephen Doolan. Trenerly also added offensive punch with a run-scoring triple as the Giants improved to 5-3. Trenerly threw three innings of perfect baseball with good defensive help from Noah Fox at third base and Roshan Jain at first. Then the Giants did battle with the Cubs and a close game was broken open in the five-run fourth.

Benj Meyers' triple (he scored on a wild pitch) and Kris Grunwald's sacrifice fly (scoring Stephen Doolan) had the game tied at 1-1 into the fourth.

That's when the Cubs pitchers discovered the strike zone was a hard thing to find and walked four of the first five batters to come up in the fourth. Jeff Trenerly came through with a line drive single to left, scoring two runs and putting the game out of reach at 5-1. As the Giants finished them off 7-1, they got a great pitching and defensive performance from many players. Seth Altshuler threw four shutout innings and got good field play from Danny Gipsman at short and Roshan Jain at first.

The Cubs were limited to four hits, two by Meyers and one each by Gabe Serpa and Berlin Germany.

In the Pirates' 7-5 win over the Cardinals, Jeff McCulloch pitched three hitless innings, striking out three. Tony Leonard went 3 for 4 and Charlie Smith was 2 for 3 for the Pirates as they improved their record to 2-6-1. For the Cardinals Richard Szwanek's three-run triple in a five-run fifth made it close but they were losers for the eighth time in nine games.

Heading into this week the Dodgers have locked things up in the first half with an 8-1 record. Next are the Giants 6-3, the Braves 4-4, the Cubs 4-3-1, the Pirates at 2-6-1 and the Cardinals 1-8.

AAA Division

In the AAA division the game of the week was also for the first-half title when the Red Sox and Twins, both 6-1, did battle.

Russell Wirth for the Sox and Kevin Vea for the Twins started the pitchers' duel by each going three innings. When they departed, the score was 1-0 in the Red Sox's advantage. The Twins tied it up in the fourth but the Sox came right back in the fifth to take the lead 2-1.

In the bottom of the sixth Any Haleen led off for the Twins with a single. He stole second and third and with two outs and one strike on the batter, Haleen broke for the plate on a wild pitch and scored the game-tying run.

The Sox couldn't score in the seventh and then the Twins had their turn. Adam Gaines singled to start the innings, Ray Cagan walked. Max Smith hit a deep fly to center and Antony Taylor caught the deep fly and threw Gaines out at third base for a double play. Cagan moved to second on the play and moments later was singled home by Max Good. The play gave the Twins the extra-inning victory.

Shane Zisman pitched one inning for the win in relief of Cagan. Diego Orellana gave up his first run in taking the defeat. He was in relief of Matt Lam who also pitched well.

In other news of the week, the Athletics got their first two wins of the season in a 10-4 win over the Tigers followed by a 19-10 beating of the White Sox.

Home runs by Corey Riday-White and David Gundelman backed the pitching of Ken Beatus and Nick Furuzawa.

Other sluggers included Cameron Johnson (single and double), a two-RBI single by Ryan Begley and two singles by Jordan Rynerson which helped beat the Tigers. Against the White Sox, the A's had an 11-run third inning that did the trick. Again the hot hitters included Johnson 2 for 3, three RBI's, Morgan two RBI singles and Ben Beck with a two-RBI double.

ing that, the Bears posted a 7-0 forfeit win over the Oaks in a game that hasn't yet been decided officially. The next day the suspense took over. In the opening game, the Bears and Seals did battle, with the Seals getting the best of it 10-8 in a nine-inning contest.

With both teams in a see-saw throughout most of the game, the Seals tied the score three times pushing the game on into the afternoon. Finally the Seals pushed across the game winners and improved their record to 4-2.

For the Bears, Alexis Cajina had an incredible afternoon, going 3 for 5 with three doubles and three runs batted in. Michael Cain added a 4 for 5 day to the totals with four singles, in a 17-hit Bear attack. Galen Sherwood and Alex Dilone pitched well for the Bears as did the duo of Seals pitchers, Derek Palmer and Matt Bartolome.

Offensively for the Seals, Dugan Yazzie, Sam Dorman, Themios Carabas and Matt Bartolome each had doubles. Defensively, Bear shortstop Zac Reatze had an outstanding day in the field.

With that game taking well over three hours to complete, the Stars and Oaks took the field.

The Oaks jumped out to a 2-0 in the first off of Star pitcher Oliver Petit. After that runs were hard to come by on both sides. Pitcher Josh Hoffman matched Petit's great pitching, putting up his own zeros.

With the Stars trailing 3-0 the sixth, Ryan Holt moved to second on a single. Brad Bennett and scored on the game on Petit's long double.

Tied at 3-3, the teams played into the night with both still going strong. The sun, gone, the Stars struck for 10th-inning magic.

With pitcher Alex Fay in ball game, the Stars were time getting a runner. Bramwell walked and stole second. With one out Holt stepped to the plate and knocked a 3-0 pitch into center field bringing home game winner.

Demetrius "Deach" Rienzo got the win pitching the sixth, after Petit had gone all he was allowed by. In his nine innings of work struck out 10 times and allowed three hits. Hoffman struck out and allowed four hits. Ryan and Petit each had two hits in day.

Move over BMW

Many good design points

The new Thunderbird is not just another make-over of last year's model. It's an all new beast that can put the pleasure back into the world of driving.

The Thunderbird, I feel, will be considered a landmark model in American automotive design as it heralds a change-about in quality and design leadership.

The last four years with Thunderbird have been banner years for Ford. The Turbo Coupe has set a new style for American personal cars that other domestic manufacturers are just catching up to now. Its sister ship, the Cougar, is from the same fresh growth with its only real difference being a new roof line.

I will be blatant in saying that the Thunderbird SC version is as much fun to drive as the equivalent BMW, Acura or Toyota Supra. Ford has been learning, and learning fast, during the past six years. For anyone who likes driving, the SC, or Super Coupe as they like to call it, has all the essential elements for drivers' happiness.

The body has style and grace; the chassis is well tuned to handle as well as ride. The SC model can deliver a blast of horsepower from a supercharged V6. The interior is laid out for the driver with excellent ergonomics of controls and with spacious accommodation for four people. A fifth person can also be accommodated in comfort on short trips.

Auto Scene

David Fetherston

Guts and glory

The top line SC model mixes both guts and glory into a world class touring coupe, while the regular LX model will keep the rest of the coupe crowd happy with its long legs. Both models travel quietly and smoothly and leave you feeling "no pain" after a long haul behind the wheel.

The body layout has been structured to incorporate features that Ford found customers wanted to see in a new coupe. More room was at the top of the list.

This was accomplished innovatively by first shortening the car two inches overall, and then stretching the wheelbase nine inches, which in turn increased the interior space 10 cubic feet and improved the car's overall ride quality. It puts the wheels out close to the corners of the car and therefore gives it a more stable platform on which to ride. In personal terms, it converts to better rear seat passenger room.

The trunk space in the Thunderbird was increased by lowering the floor and designing hideaway hinges that do not pinch luggage when the trunk is closed.

The interiors of the LX and the SC are attractive but different.

The LX has a digital dash which clearly delivers its information. The seating is comfortable and quite supportive. While I might prefer firmer support bolsters, the standard seats are body hugging and hold you well behind the wheel.

The SC is definitely designed for the sporty driver. It has a fine set of readable analog gauges, a thick leatherbound steering wheel and great sports seats. The large speedo and tachometer are surrounded by smaller fuel and engine information gauges. Across the lower lip is an information line which lets you know about the status of the vehicle's mechanical and electrical systems at a glance.

The seat belts are also new for the Thunderbird. They are partly passive and use a motorized ratchet in the door frame to lock the sash belt across your upper torso. But the waist belt is a manual operation and it is easy to forget that it is not clipped in.

Design improvements

The Thunderbird uses many aerodynamic tricks, including the sweeping semi-fastback roof line which rolls down across the trunk. This design work all contributes to the vehicle's inherent quietness.

From a driver's point of view, the Thunderbird is a pleasurable vehicle even as a base LX model. Powered by a 3.8 liter V6, the LX has been improved over last year's model with new low-friction roller tappets, lightweight rocker covers and an aluminum hub crankshaft damper. It produces 140 horsepower at 3800 rpm and 215 foot pounds of torque at 2400 rpm.

The electronic fuel injection has also been revised to use sequential multi-port injection, which delivers fuel more effectively than last year's non-sequential multi-port design. A four speed automatic overdrive is standard on the LX Thunderbird.

It's been a long time coming, but this is Ford USA's first rear wheel drive, fully independent suspended automobile. They have not just revised last year's, they have developed a complete new suspension package for the coupe.

Up front, the suspension uses a long spindle SLA-Short long-arm design, incorporating an upper A-arm, lower control arm, tension strut and coil spring along with a 1.2" sway bar. This new compact suspension design allows for a lower hood line and helps increase tire life.

The rear uses an interesting H-arm at the bottom and a simple control arm at the top sprung with a strut and coil spring. The rear also has a sway bar and all the suspension bushings are Teflon coated to reduce friction.

All Thunderbirds have four wheel disc brakes; the LX version has a foot-operated emergency. The SC a transmission hump mounted lever. For wheels, the LX is equipped with P205-70R15" Michelin LX tires fitted to a pressed steel wheel. A swirl ribbed alloy wheel is an option on the LX and standard on the SC.

The Thunderbird SC, or Super Coupe, comes with a hot supercharged and intercooled V6, uprated suspension and brake groups, as well as exterior and interior trim and equipment.

Under the hood is one of Ford's hottest performance engines in years. It produces 210 horsepower at 3800 rpm and winds out a massive 315 foot pounds of torque at a lowly 2600 rpm. This adds up to seven seconds from zero to 60. The standard five speed stick shift version of the SC operates just fine and has a pleasantly notchy feel.

The supercharged motor idles quietly and its performance potential is not audible. Once under way, it has a nice rumble to its exhaust and a strong surge of power with none of the traditional lag of a turbo charger.

With a price range of $15,000 to $25,000, the Thunderbird LX and SC are sure to find many eager buyers. Their differing styles and fun performance are sure to set them as popular models for the coming model years.

Porsche cuts price on its 944 series

Porsche Cars North America Inc. announced to its dealers a reduction in the manufacturer's suggested retail price of its 1989 944 series models. The announcement was made by PCNA President Brian Bowler at a meeting of U.S. Porsche dealers in Stuttgart, West Germany.

The price changes apply to all 1989 944 vehicles in dealer or port stock from April 1 onward. Bowler told the dealer gathering, "For months, automotive enthusiast magazines have been telling the public that the 1989 944s are superb, powerful and rock-solid sports cars with substantial performance and equipment improvements over the 1988 models. Now, we are telling the market that Porsche value is every bit as high as Porsche performance."

Bowler credited successful cost reductions at Porsche AG as making the price action possible. Porsche AG last week announced improved earnings for the first half of its fiscal year which began in August 1988.

The reductions in MSRP are in the range of 5.7 to 8.6 percent.

The Porsche 944 will now be priced at $33,245. Its 1989 model year introductory price, announced on Sept. 19, 1988 was $36,360. The 944 S2, which had been priced at $45,285, will now carry a suggested retail price of $41,900. The top-of-the-line 944, the 944 Turbo, was introduced for 1989 at $47,600. It will now be sold for $44,900.

Similar price reductions were also announced on 1988 944 models remaining in dealer stock.

When the 944 series 1989 model year prices were announced in September last year, they included the addition of new performance equipment as well as the addition of the most popular comfort and convenience options as standard equipment. The product upgrades introduced with the 1989 models included new body styling combined with a new 3.0-liter engine on the 944 S2, a new performance engine package on the 944 Turbo, and a new 2.7-liter engine for the 944. An anti-lock braking system was made standard on all 944 models.

Dodge aims spring discount package at young drivers

The Dodge Division of Chrysler Motors announced a spring package that will appeal to young drivers who already are thinking of a cool summer ride down country lanes, winding roads and freeways.

The Dodge Shadow Spring Special — a discount package priced at $600 — includes bright, racy side and rear graphics. It borrows the deck spoiler from Shadow's top-of-the-line ED version and includes an AM/FM stereo radio with cassette and four-speaker system, a console and a rear defroster.

"The spring Shadow should be dynamite among young drivers," said Charles B. Kitz, general marketing manager, Dodge Car. "It makes a great graduation gift and packs a welcome discount to boot."

The high-impact graphics, in colorful script design, enhance the rear and side of the sporty compact coupe and four-door sedan. The spring package offers four exterior colors: bright white, exotic red, black and sunlight yellow. The interior is medium quartz.

Manufacturer's suggested retail price of the two-door model Shadow with the youthful spring package is $8,995. MSRP for the four-door model is $9,195.

Mimosa prepares for annual Youth Homes Treasure Sale

MORE THAN 430 hours! That's how much time the ladies of the Mimosa Auxiliary of Youth Homes, Inc., spent working on the "Crazy Quilt" which is to be their contribution to the Youth Homes Treasure Sale. The crazy quilt is made entirely of men's ties and is a wild and wonderful collection of patterns and colors. It will be one of the prizes for the raffle held in conjunction with the treasure sale.

The Mimosa Chapter, which covers all of West County (with a few members from over the line in Albany and Berkeley) has its own annual boutique fund raiser at the end of October. They participate in the county-wide Treasure Sale, which is the spring event for all the auxiliaries.

Here each auxiliary has its own function. Mimosa's boutique will sell hand-made items made by members of the chapter. This year they have added "This and That," which is, we are told, a "glorified flea market." Other auxiliaries sell antiques, books, plants and food.

PEARL CHESTER, president of Mimosa, says the chapter participates in other parts of the event. Member Caroline Quan has been doing most of the correspondence for the Treasure Sale. Other members have been in the planning sessions.

"We love it," Pearl says, "although it is a lot of work and very time consuming." The items the members make for the boutique are always beautifully crafted and clever. They are either designed by the maker or adapted from something someone has seen. This year's "This and That" will feature items in excellent condition donated by members and friends.

"The real work has been the crazy quilt," Pearl says. This is the second year they have made a quilt for the raffle. "The last, I think," Pearl groans.

The Mimosa quilt is only one of the prizes in the giant raffle. The grand prize is five nights for two including airfare at the Islander on the Beach at Kauai, Hawaii. Additionally, each auxiliary is contributing prizes.

The Treasure Sale will be held May 5 to 8 at the Orinda Community Church in Orinda Village. There will be a preview party on Friday evening. The sale will be Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Youth Homes provides housing in a homelike atmosphere for children who must be separated from their families for one reason or another — often neglect or abuse or because of repeated running away. The court sends children to Youth Homes where they remain until conditions improve in their homes or until they reach maturity.

The public is invited to attend the Treasure Sale.

DR. MARGARET ALAMO, director of the Center for Psychological Studies, says that the center is moving. "It is sort of 'musical building,'" she says. "The building has moved to a new building in El Cerrito and we have taken over the lovely home that they used for their offices here in Albany."

"Ginger" Alamo, who has profiled in this column in the past, has great enthusiasm and joy in her work at the center. She had supervised the remodeling of their old building making room where little had been available. Now they have expanded much more.

The outside of the building, 1398 Solano Ave., has been lightened and brightened with paint and trim. Inside, color was made into an extended library. Two administrative offices were added plus additional rooms for classes.

The pride of the institution, two rooms which have been and decorated to be used for therapy, including sand and degrees for people already working in their fields. These are, therefore, Saturday and evening classes available. Some of their graduates also have profiled in these columns, having done or doing some interesting studies in the field.

AND ANOTHER call from an alumna of Community is a colleague of Elizabeth Rasmussen, the Peace Garden lady, has written to advise that she will speak at the annual spring luncheon of the United Methodist Women May 6 at noon. She will, of course, speak on the Peace Garden project, which is presently holding a design competition for the garden. It will be built on a promontory that stretches out into the Potomac in Washington, D.C.

Esther Sergeant, chairman of the spring luncheon, says that will be held at the Fellowship Hall of the El Cerrito United Methodist Church, at 6830 Stockton Ave. Donation is $5 and reservations may be made by calling the church office at 525-3500 or Esther Sergeant at 524-7232.

AND OUR LAST call was from a member of the Professional Entertainers Against Drugs who advised that Brian Gardner, whom you may have seen a few weeks ago here, was the master of ceremonies for May Art Agnos' "Driving Under the Influence Project." Gardner presented Mayor Agnos' award to high school students for not drinking on prom night.

So nice to hear from all these people. I'd love to hear from you, too. Please give us your ideas, interesting people, events, travel, etc. Call 524-5688 or write 555 Pierce St., Albany 94706.
